The supreme decision-making body for WHO is the World Health Assembly, supported by the Executive Board.

At regional level, the work of WHO is governed by regional committees. The Regional Committee for the Eastern Mediterranean convenes every year at the beginning of October and is attended by all countries of the Eastern Mediterranean Region. During these sessions, Member States discuss and endorse regional policies, activities and financial plans.

» Regional Committee

» World Health Assembly

Monday 20th of May 2024 02:54:58 PM