

© World Health Organization 2012

This user-friendly guide on promoting a healthy diet for the Eastern Mediterranean Region provides information on individual nutrients and food components and presents a set of recommendations for an overall pattern of eating that can be adopted by the general public in countries of the Region. The recommendations contained in this guide are compatible with the different cultures and eating patterns of consumers within the target population and are based on the availability of local and affordable foods which are widely consumed by the population.

Friday 3rd of May 2024 12:12:32 AM