

The Eastern Mediterranean Region is home to 10 countries and 1 billion people. It is a region of high diversity, with a wide range of cultures, languages, and religions. The region is also home to some of the world's most vulnerable populations, including children, women, and people living in conflict-affected areas. The Region's health systems are under pressure from a range of factors, including population growth, urbanization, and the increasing burden of non-communicable diseases. The Region's health systems are also facing a range of challenges, including a shortage of health workers, inadequate financing, and weak governance.
