Figure 1. National health information systems

Key functions of a national health information system:
- Data generation
- Data compilation
- Data analysis and synthesis
- Information communication
- Use for policy development, monitoring, and evaluation

Key sources of data:
- Civil and vital registration
- Census and surveys
- Individual medical records
- Service and facility records
- Financial and resource tracking information