

United Nations Resident Coordinator Mr Stefan Priesner addresses the high-level meeting chaired by Health Minister Dr Bahram Eynollahi held between WHO, Ministry of Health and Medical Education, United Nations agencies, and representatives from the international community in Islamic Republic of Iran. Credit: WHO/Islamic Republic of Iran

Thursday, 28 April 2022 – The World Health Organization (WHO) in the Islamic Republic of Iran, Ministry of Health and Medical Education, United Nations agencies active in the field of health and representatives from the international community came together to join forces in commemoration of World Health Day 2022 and reaffirm individual and bilateral commitments in a meeting held on Tuesday 26 April in Tehran.

The third of its kind in a bimonthly series held at the request of the Minister of Health and Medical Education Dr Bahram Eynollahi as an experience-sharing platform, the roundtable also welcomed ambassadors from Spain, Japan, Bulgaria, Croatia, Cuba, Nicaragua and Hungary.

The meeting was opened with a speech by the Minister, followed by an address by the WHO Regional Director for the Eastern Mediterranean Dr Ahmed Al-Mandhari, in virtual attendance, who pointed to the importance of this year's World Health Day theme 'Our Planet, Our Health'. He expressed WHO's readiness to continue mutual collaboration with Islamic Republic of Iran for a healthier planet and a healthier future.

