

WHO EMRO is the regional office of the World Health Organization (WHO) for the Eastern Mediterranean Region. It is located in Cairo, Egypt. The region covers 20 countries and has a population of approximately 3.5 billion people. WHO EMRO's primary focus is on improving public health and preventing disease in the region. It works closely with member states and other regional organizations to address health challenges and promote health equity.

WHO EMRO is committed to providing technical assistance and leadership in the region. It supports member states in strengthening health systems, improving surveillance systems, and responding to outbreaks. WHO EMRO also works to address the health needs of vulnerable populations and promote health equity.

WHO EMRO is a key partner for member states in the region. It provides technical assistance and leadership in the region. WHO EMRO also works to address the health needs of vulnerable populations and promote health equity.

WHO EMRO is committed to providing technical assistance and leadership in the region. It supports member states in strengthening health systems, improving surveillance systems, and responding to outbreaks. WHO EMRO also works to address the health needs of vulnerable populations and promote health equity.

6230329-51-0092 :emro@who.int | www.emro.who.int | www.who.int

WHO EMRO is committed to providing technical assistance and leadership in the region. It supports member states in strengthening health systems, improving surveillance systems, and responding to outbreaks. WHO EMRO also works to address the health needs of vulnerable populations and promote health equity.

WHO EMRO is committed to providing technical assistance and leadership in the region. It supports member states in strengthening health systems, improving surveillance systems, and responding to outbreaks. WHO EMRO also works to address the health needs of vulnerable populations and promote health equity.

Sunday 19th of May 2024 05:40:26 PM