

23 January 2023 – Yemen's humanitarian crisis, now in its eighth year, has crippled the country's health facilities and laboratories, while curtailing the quality and availability of many essential health services.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has renewed its partnership with the King Salman Humanitarian Aid and Relief Center (KSrelief) to provision Yemen's health system with medicines, supplies, and equipment needed for general care, child health, reproductive and maternal health, dialysis, and treatment of non-communicable diseases.
