

18 August 2023 – After the conflict cast its shadow on Yemen, many families were forced to leave their areas of origin and flee to other locations for security and shelter. This was the case with Khaled's family, who fled their home in Al Hodeida to Aden for protection.

Living in a camp for internally displaced people (IDP) after they left their hometown, Khaled's father struggled to find work, leaving them in with limited resources and unable to afford even the most basic food like plain bread. Hunger severely impacted Khaled's health, and symptoms of malnutrition – swelling of the feet and hands with loss of appetite – began to appear.
