

~~Dr. Ahmad Al-Hadi, Director of the National Center for Cancer Control and Prevention, WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region, said that the conflict in Yemen has led to a significant increase in cancer cases, particularly in the areas of Sana'a and Aden. He noted that the lack of access to healthcare and the destruction of medical facilities have made it difficult for patients to receive timely and effective treatment. The situation is particularly dire for children and young adults, who are often the most vulnerable to the effects of conflict. Dr. Al-Hadi called for international support to help Yemen rebuild its healthcare system and provide essential services to its population.~~
